The Senate's Elights.

The President certainly was not well up in the law respecting the right of the Senate to papers in the custody of the departments, and perhaps he is not aware of the penalties for destroying such papers. The statute was passed by the President's own party when it was at the height of its power. To see clearly the conflict between the Senate of the United States and the posi-

Forsker and seaver,

A Stalwart writes to the Philadelphia Press favoring the nomination of General Beaver for Governor. The causes that conspired to defeat Beaver are well known, and owing to the unfortunate conflict within the ranks of the Republican party a good man was slaughtered. Governor Foraker, of Ohio, met with the same fate in his first canvass, but his defeat was not due to the same causes that operated in General Beaver's case. His first sacrifice was rewarded by a renomination and elec-was rewarded by a renomination and election.

General Beaver deserves well of the Republicans of Pennsylvania and of the people of the great commonwealth he has done so much to preserve in the union of States, and for whose sake he has suffered on the battle field. When the Democratic party of to-day is calling to office men who party of to-day is calling to office men who were prominent in the Southern Confederacy, is it not time that the Republican party was honoring more of the gallant men who wore the blue. General Beaver ought to be the next Governor of Pennsyl-

When General Tims was about 10 years old he met with an exciting adventure. He got home late one night and entered the house through a window. His father, a very excitable old gentleman, was under the impression that a burglar was in the house, and catching a glimpse of a the bouse, and catching a glimpse of a the year to purify the blood, invigorate the system, excite the liver to action, and restore the healthy tone and vigor of the whole physical mechanism.

Daw the house, and catching a glimpse of a dark figure in the hall he fired at it six r times with his revolver. Having exhausted his powder and ball, old Tims flashed a light upon the situation and discovered that the supposed burglar was his son. After the flurry was over the boy was asked why he had not revealed his identity. Turning his solemn and impassive face to his father he replied with quiet dignity: "I thought I'd wait till you got through; I didn't like to interrupt you." "But, me che-ild," groaned told Tims, "when the bullets whistled around your head, tell me what were your sentiments, what were your sentiments, what were your shoughts?" "Which?" inquired the youngster. "What did you think about?" to "Nothing," was the calm response, "nothing at ali." And that was all they could get out of him. The delighted father was so proud of the boy's coolness under fire that he related the incident to everybody in town. After that young Tims had a stremestour propulation for curarse. in town. Why the Grim Grizzly Eyes Him Askance.

A day or two ago I was asked to see a taxidermist here who sells his wares to residents to ornament their houses and to strangers who are visiting Washington. He ttold me that one gentleman in the vening without experiencing the slightest relaxation, and I would not now at any rate dispense with it." to strangers who are visiting Washington. He told me that one gentleman in Chicago was putting every beast native to the United States in his house in the form of the furs, lined and mounted. Upon the taxidermist's floor was a grizzly bear's robe, the bear's head and eyes being preserved, but not his lower law, whereby the robe was worth only half as much as if the whole head had been retained with the skull. He saked $50 for his grizzly bear's fur, and asked $100 for a black bear's fur, and asked $100 for a black bear's fur on which the whole head was in relief. He had a live bear in a cage in his working-room, and told me that he had killed its associate three weeks ago. Said he, "I wanted the skin, and I shot one of the bear's with a rifls. From that time to this the other bear has done notting but go up and down the cage, and he looks at me and knows I killed his companion. He has been in a state of excitances ever since that time, and, though he will take food from me, he never forgets what I did."

This Association does not go offering a rays and tract only to hungry people, but, co-operating with the W. W. B. Society, the hungry are fed, the naked clothed, and those eager for the bread of life, of whom so many have been found, are given it.
The association, though in its infancy, aims at much practical work, which as soon as a permanent home is secured, will soon as a permanent home is secured, will be developed. The society is very fortunate in numbering among its active members, Dr. Harriet B. Jones, who has given her services free to all patients whom the association request her to serve in that way. This is not intended to usurp the work of the city physician, nor to cutlivate pauperism; as in no case will the association authorize free attendance where percentages any way able to give remunerate.

tion authorize free attendance where persons are in any way able te give remuneration. The association aims to make people self-supporting.

The reports brought to the meetings by Miss Lizzie Boyd, now reading the Bible and doing mission work in this city, are deeply interesting and at times thrilling. These alone prove the need of such an association as this. Her work is of priceies value to the society and city. The members are divided into active, such as engage in the work of the association; passive, those who make an annual voluntary contribution to the Treasury; life members, those who pay in at one time the eum of ten dollars. the sum of ten dollars.
